THE WOMEN'S DILEMMA

GALL GIWN OUT OF PLACE ON A PO-

yet the Assistants on the Women's of the Sentinel Want to Attend a Ball and Work Too.

There has been a great discussion among women reporters who are to take the runs Wednesday night for the that they can go to the Assembly ball. Now the Assembly ball is to he the fashionable event of the winter. Handsome gowns are in progress of making and the whole affair is to be brilliant in the extreme, Now, every one knows quite the thing to wear a ball gown down to the police the theaters and various other business trip. In fact, the nan is dressed for business the has been thought they could get in a few dances at the Assembly, and the present costume proposed is a black silk skirt with a handsome waist, the latter to be covered with a sealskin coat. The young women are not to go alone for their news, they are to have escorts. The best young men are the fortunate beings. The young women with their escorts will go on their bicycles. They expect to have great fun. Of course, ordinary reporters do not have any great fun hunting for news, but these are extraordinary reporters. It is hoped and expected that any one who knows a choice bit of news will kindly give it to the young women, for the cause of charity as well as for their own sakes. The experience ought to be made a happy one of the woman's edition reporters.

The loving cup, which heretofore has been generally made of silver, has been adopted as a design by the makers of fine latest thing to give for a present. It is especially adapted and is passed around the table for all to drink the health of the celebrants. The polton with blue decoration is taking the lead and the shops are full of pretty things made of it. Another novelty is the Russian enamel work, which is used for numberless

A popular woman on North Meridian street had an experience Wednesday which has not only amused the family, but everyone who has heard it. Wednesday morning a box from a florist's was left at the house and it was thought that some one had sent her some flowers. When she opened the box it was found to be filled with patty shells. She knew they were not for her, and it occurred to her that they must be meant for a friend of hers on another street who had had a party the night before, so she forthwith sent her man over with them to say that they had been left at her house by mistake. The friend received them and opened the box, thinking they were flowers. They were not for her, and she asked the maid from whom they had been received. The name was mentioned and the box was returned to the first house again. By this time it was late afternoon. They were left at another door and another maid placed them in the front hall. That evening the North Meridian-street woman and her husband were going to the Contemporary Club. The husband saw the box, and, thinking they were flowers for his wife, he put it in the carriage and took it down to the Propylaeum. They were early. and he followed her into the dressing room with the box. He opened it, and lo, there were the patty shells. He hurried out and called the coachman and gave him the box to take back to the house. They were duly carried there for the third time. Not long after the coachman arrived and took them in the butler from a neighbor's house, where there was a company, called at the door to see if any patty shells had been left there by mistake. After a long day of travels they finally reached their destina-

At a dinner given during the past week a pretty device, original with the hostess, was used. The ices which were served were green and in the form of a fern leaf. Candied violets were sprinkled over the top. The plates on which they were served were of expuisite china, having an open, lace-like edge. Sprays of smilax were fastened to this lace edge with small bows of narrow lavender satin ribbon and followed the form of the plate half way round. The green rested on the plate, making a border, and the ice filled the remainder of the space. The effect was especially good.

Elliott. invited by a club of another city to visit it on its open day. In addition, there came a request for her to prepare a short paper on a given subject and read it at the meeting. The clubwoman was at considerable trouble to get the material for her paper, and she wrote it with extra care, and felt that it was all that she could ask. She dressed and flowers for the occasion herself in her good clothes, took the train and went to the other city in time for the meeting. The programme consisted of various readings, papers, conversations and the serving of refreshments. During the literary part of the exercises the visitor sat with her paper in her lap. She was not called on to read it. When the train was due in the evening she took it and came known women, and will have the character lue in the evening she took it and came home, and her paper has never yet been seen by any one but herself. She was not at all hurt over the lack of remembrance on the part of those who asked her to read, and she has treasured up the incident to make her smile on her solemn days.
